Without a Shadow of Doubt!

Working in Your Own Shadow Presents Maddening Complications

Pure white dual beams of light from Dr. Kim’s dental head lamp scatter the shadows created by your instruments and hands to provide a beautifully clear view. Untroubled by shadow, you can improve your work and lessen your eyestrain. Dr. Kim’s lightens the physical load as well! They are featherweight plastic and tip the scales at only 100 grams yet are as durable as your work ethic. They are wireless, too; a pair of Eco-Batteries allow full freedom of movement with up to 12 hours of continuous work time and just a two-hour recharge.

You can even change the light colour between transparent, warm, red and daylight to suit your needs and a choice of quick change multi-focus lenses permit you to adjust position and posture for optimal comfort. Loupes or surgical telescope are also available as is a camera.

It’s a head lamp with a bright future and will improve your working conditions beyond a shadow of a doubt.

“Practitioners should give thanks that physician and engineer Dr. Kim Gichun spent the last decade creating and perfecting the first shadow-free head lamp”, according to a recent article in dental lifestyle magazine Incisal Edge.
Standard Interdentals

The brush is easy to bend enabling full access to the interdental spaces between the molars.

The brush is also fully flexible and after bending will retain its original shape.

Plastic covered high tensile strength wire effectively removes the hidden plaque and debris between the teeth that brushing alone cannot reach.

Each interdental brush has its own hygienic cap which can also be used as a handle extension. The brush and handle are manufactured as a complete unit.

Antibacterial Interdentals

Antibacterial Brush & Cap
Kills 99.9% Bacteria

Precision made in the UK, this new product retains the exceptional quality and iconic design of the regular interdental brush, but with added antibacterial protection. This high quality hygienic brush fights bacteria on a cellular level, killing bacteria and inhibiting its growth by the addition of new antibacterial technology in the manufacturing process.

Completely invisible, tasteless and odorless; it silently protects the user against harmful bacteria that could be present on the brush. Every brush comes complete with an antibacterial cap, the ingredients are added during manufacture of both the nylon filament and the moulding of the protective cap to produce a hygienic ‘safe zone’ around the brush head.

BioMinF®

New Exciting Science!

Professor Robert Hill explains the technology behind BioMin F, the innovative new toothpaste that claims to remineralise tooth enamel over 12 hours thanks to slow-release bioactive glass technology.

Question

Bioactive glass is very different to what most people know of glass. Could you describe the properties and its application in dentistry?

Robert Hill (RH):

Most people regard glass as chemically inert and insoluble. Bioactive glass actually dissolves in the mouth and releases calcium and phosphate. In our composition it also releases fluoride. Historically, bioactive glasses were developed as a bone substitute material and are regarded as bioactive material. They were not designed for toothpastes. We redesigned it specifically to optimise toothpaste.

Question

What are the main benefits of including fluoride within the glass, rather than soluble fluorides that are present in most toothpastes?

RH:

In BioMinF toothpaste we’ve got about a third of the fluoride content of conventional toothpaste, but in terms of promoting remineralisation it works far more effectively, because of the slow release. In order to remineralise and for apatite you need a source of calcium phosphate. In some cases where you have patients with a good salivary flow and there’s a plentiful supply of calcium and phosphate, that’s not an issue.

But in a lot of patients with caries or dry mouth conditions, the saliva is not good quality and tends to be low in calcium and phosphates. So actually delivering calcium and phosphate with the fluoride is much more effective.

Question

What are BioMin’s benefits over Novamin, the active ingredient in Sensodyne Repair & Protect toothpaste?

RH:

The Novamin active ingredient is conventional Bioglass, with a relatively low phosphate content. Conversely BioMinF has increased phosphate content, which increases the amount and speed at which apatite (tooth mineral) is formed. The fluoride also speeds up the process, and rather than forming hydroxy carbonate apatite, it forms fluorapatite, which is much more durable in the mouth.

Question

Are there other advantages?

RH:

There are other advantages: the particle size of BioMinF is smaller than that of Novamin, so it’s got a less gritty texture and it’s less abrasive towards the enamel. The glass is also slightly softer, which again is less abrasive towards the enamel. We’ve got a higher fraction of particles that can go into the dentine tubules, so it makes it more effective in tubular occlusion.

Question

Is BioMin technology patent protected anywhere in the world?

RH:

It’s covered by patents filed by Imperial College and Queen Mary University of London.
Professor Hill is a leading authority on bioactive glass. He is research director at the Dental Institute and head of Dental Physical Sciences at Queen Mary University of London. He has published over 250 papers and files over 20 patents. Professor Hill led the group that won the Armourers and Braisers’ Venture in 2013 based on the BioMinF proposal, and developed and patented with Dr David Gillam and Periproducts, a commercially available nanohydroxyapatite toothpaste and oral rinse, now sold in Boots and other stores. He is also the inventor of Serencem, a specialised glass ionomer cement for ENT surgery.

PROBLEM: Expensive wipes are not doing what you think they are!
A study by Cardiff University found that wet wipes are helping to spread deadly superbugs. This is because most wipes simply dry out before the solution has had the necessary contact time.

SOLUTION: Dentiguard ensures the surface is uniformly and adequately wet, kills pathogens on contact and is 100% safe!
